

after 27 years in the travel industry (travel agency owner), I can tell you both personally and professionally that myself, my employees and all clients asked so far, unanimously DO NOT want cell phones used aboard aircraft. The cacophony would be unbearable; and if you are afraid of road rage, imagine "rude rage" when a passenger cannot move or get away from hour long conversations in surround sound from all quarters when they are trying to read/study/sleep in one of the few places of escape on the planet. Honestly, this is an illogically conceived idea and should be given no consideration whatsoever. No one needs to communicate 24 hrs a day, no one.

thank you
